The International Conference on the Theory and Practice of Human Lactation Research and Breastfeeding Management invites the submission of abstracts to be considered for paper presentations and poster session. Content of abstracts should demonstrate the application of strategies to human lactation, breastfeeding management and research. Case studies are also acceptable. Abstracts may describe contributions to theory, completed work involving human lactation, breastfeeding management and research, work in progress, or proposed application of human lactation and breastfeeding management to other health issues.

Suggested topics include, but are not limited to:

- Breastfeeding issues of diverse cultural groups
- The role of breastfeeding in the development of autoimmune diseases
- Experiences with the Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative™
- Breastfeeding by adolescent mothers
- Studies on milk insufficiency
- Studies on growth
- Diet and nutrition for breastfeeding mothers
- Drugs in breast milk
- Preventing hypoglycemia in normal babies
- Effect of labor and delivery medications on the neonate
- Breastfeeding promotion program ideas and implementation strategies
- Development of materials for peer counselor programs and experiences in implementing them
- Strategies for teaching mothers with 24-hour discharge and community follow-up

Four copies of the proposal must be received by May 30, 2010. Authors of program proposals selected for presentation will be notified by June 16, 2010 and will be requested to submit additional materials. Applicants are responsible for any and all expenses related to the conference. Presenters will be entitled to a substantially reduced registration fee for the core conference.
